Primary School Brunswick East

Exceptional Education

Newsletter 4, Term 4, 2022

Friday 28th October

Lord,

We pray that we may see in our children an example of faith, and that through their joyful witness we may grow in wonder and awe at the gift of creation.

We pray that all children, who are among the most vulnerable in society, receive the love and support they need to grow and flourish.

We pray that all people recognise children as a gift and blessing from God.

Amen

Dear Parents/Carers,

This week is National Children's Week. Children's Week is a national celebration that recognises the talents, skills, achievements and rights of children. Each year, thousands of Victorian children take part in Children's Week festivities. During Children's Week, local councils and not-for-profit organisations organise open days, displays, special events, virtual spaces and online-based activities. These celebrate childhood and showcase children's achievements. All Children's Week events are free to families with children aged from birth to 12 years. It's a great opportunity for Victorian families to enjoy fun, engaging and educational experiences.

Click on the following link to search free events in our area.

A reminder the following days next week are student free days.

Monday 31/10/22 Professional Practice Day for staff - No students to attend.

Tuesday 1/11/22 Melbourne Cup Public Holiday - No students to attend.

Enjoy a well deserved long weekend.

Master Plan Funding Success

I am delighted to confirm our application for the 'Stage 1 Master Plan' funding has been approved by the State Government for the amount of $1,970,000.00. We were thrilled to hear this news and are currently finalising the working drawings with Hayball our architects and look forward to sharing these with you when they are completed. This funding will be used to refurbish the Max Chester Building facing Miller St which currently houses the library on the ground floor and two key learning spaces on the first floor. We are currently engaging with MACS (Melbourne Archdiocese Catholic Schools) in relation to the next steps we have to take in order for work to commence within 12 months. I will communicate any further information I receive as we begin to plan for this exciting project. I would like to thank Sam Brumale, Howard McCorkell, Jackie McGrath, Catherine Muhlebach, Alvin Ng, Carmen Roberts, Catherine Spurrirt, Samantha Thompson, Fr Greg Bourke and Fr Linh Pham (School Advisory Council) for their support and guidance throughout the process which ultimately ended in a successful application. We are excited about the positives this refurbishment will bring to our school.

Second Hand Uniform Shop

Second hand uniforms will be sold on Monday the 7th of November from 3:00 p.m. onwards. A table will be set up outside the library and our friendly parents will be happy to support you with your purchase. All items require a gold coin donation. Gates will open at 3:00 p.m.

Inquiry Cultural Immersion

On Thursday our Year 1 and 2 students were immersed in a cultural extravaganza. We thank our parent experts for sharing their rich cultural backgrounds in order to grow our students' knowledge of rich traditions, customs and beliefs from around the world.

"The Italian cultural presentation was my favourite because we got to guess where the ancient Gods went".

Elijah H

"I want to learn more about Korea and what type of special occasions they wear their special outfits".

Kyra H

"I would like to learn more about Africa because there are lots of cool animals".

Agata B

"I would like to learn more about Irish culture and their dancing because they do it really fast".

Aiden S

"Yesterday I learnt about Greece from Soula and Elektra. Greek people celebrate Greek Easter and they eat red eggs and tsourekki bread".

World
Teachers'
Day
Thanks

Today we celebrate World Teachers' Day. Here at OLHC, we are incredibly lucky to have a hardworking, dedicated and caring team of teachers who work incredibly hard every day to provide the best possible learning opportunities for our students. On behalf of our entire school community, I would like to say a HUGE thank you to our teachers for all they do for our students and our school. The theme this year is 'Hats Off To Teachers'. This is to recognise the positive impact teachers have on the lives of children and their families. We thank the Parent Association for providing a wonderful lunch and class gift to each teacher, this gesture was greatly appreciated.

INSIGHTS

Tricky Friendship Days

Relatively small issues, like not being invited to a party, can arouse big, intense feelings in our kids. Because belonging is at stake, friendship challenges will always feel like a life-threatening experience – so be assured that most parents find themselves dealing with powerful tears and shattering disappointments after tricky friendship days.

It is easy for both parents and teachers to fall into the trap of trying to “dial down the drama” when our kids feel overwhelmed. However, minimising or dismissing strong feelings will only tend to ramp them up, because our tween’s brains seek to be heard and understood in the process of regulating. I’d also like to suggest that it denies our children the opportunity to master these big feelings. Our kids need to feel to practise the emotional regulation strategies they need to navigate life well.

I want to share three practical strategies that parents can do to support their tweens during these moments. Friendship challenges are an incredibly rich platform to help kids learn emotional regulation strategies, as well as social skills, and we want to capitalise on both as we coach them forward.

Strategy 1: Let’s not fight the intensity

The more I learn about emotions the more I am in awe of our body’s way of coming up with solutions to discomfort, anguish and pain we experience. It doesn’t make any sense to judge that process but rather appreciate it. That’s why we want tweens to know there are no bad or good emotions. There are only healthy emotions, and each one of them is an acceptable and necessary part of being human. Ideally, we want tweens to feel safe to feel, without shame or guilt. This means accepting emotions within our home, in the same way we accept anything else about ourselves (or our experiences) that we cannot change – our age, our height, freckles or ears.

Strategy 2: Ask questions that empower

Although it’s tempting (and much quicker) to offer children prescription answers to friendship problems, it won’t help them in the long term. The problem with childhood conflict always being followed by adult intervention, is that kids can get into the habit of projecting their wishful thinking onto someone else who they perceive as being more powerful than they are.

If our children focus their energy on recruiting support rather than problem-solving, they miss vital learning opportunities. We are best to ask questions that express a sense of curiosity and empower them to take ownership.

Strategy 3: Find a positive expression

Whereas there are times that we suppress our painful emotions for our own survival, emotions are far better off moving through our kids rather than festering inside them.

parenting*ideas

One of my dearly loved local psychotherapists wisely tells me that children who have imaginations become their own play therapists. Play is a distraction that pulls kids out of their heads and into their bodies. Any type of play including immersing themselves in craft, participating in drama, dance, or sport, or building forts, slides and adventure courses are all helpful.

In closing

Home really is the hero in kids' lives. It is the emotional shield from all that hurts us, bothers us, and tires us. It's a place where love is tangible, and we are cared for in ways that make it easier for us to move back into the world with a soft heart. It's the Utopia that we all yearn for and strive towards. When they feel disappointed, lost, afraid or disoriented it will be the predictability of home that continues to welcome them with open arms and wise words. As you implement these strategies, know you are offering your tween the home they deserve.
